

As the fires bellow roared and the distruction of Sec-tra, the birth place of the one powerful Altonian Dynasty where for millions of years the people of (TBD) formed the first form of government uniting 7 fractured kingdoms, where for many centnuries of infighting happened bettwe the respected nobility and commond a like forming factions and alligesns only to turn on each other like the paricities they are, for neither those nobilities of fmagical desent or martial prowerec notr those that relied on the money lending trades could ever do was destroy Sec-tra. In its history many times has the heart of this land tasted the purge of fire and yet the bones refuse to give in and what comes after is stronger. Though while the world evolves the quiet disrubtion of the flow of of powers start to appear and many of the realms are starting to feel it.

A sudden thunder wave hits Gallows Hills two figures stand and watch the destruction unfold screams of terror and horror fill the night as the flames that are enveloping the city transfigure into various forms running ramp[ed through the streets exploding anytime they enter a home or business.

They watch this with at detached sense of cusriosity as if this was but a simple test.

“Were you sure to tell the fists not to go overboard and leave some of the citizineship alive...” – speaks on of the figures

“Well I.....I may have fogorten a couple details but im sure they will find a happy middle ground, I did tell them though that they would have to help in the reconstruction if we were.....under staffed and I didn’t mean admin level.’ - responded the other figure showed in darkness the only thing visible was a single dancing light reflecting from the pummel of his sword.

A sudden chill passes through the meadow as these two figures simultatiously react one pulls a wand from beneath his cap while the other dose the same put holds a knife in ready combat.

“The Emperor wont be happy, now will he. You know how much he hates fighting....” – Says a slim younger looking youghts dark black hair and almost cat like eyes as he walks out of a rip that seemed like a scare around the fabric of the air itself. The figure then takes a knee and speaks. “My apologies for the little joke, but your mutual friend insited on the little jab.” He says with an impish grin, “But,,” an now his tone changes “He is made and he is down their leading the forces and he is winning despite the overwhelming numbers. If you ask me if the plan was to make him more of a hero your doing a good job”

The three figures stand a few more minutes as the final barks of a dog die down. They look at each other and without a word the first of them wakes lifts his wand and slashes through the air, an audible rip is heard and a cold wind blows through chilling the air for a moment as the ripples at the edges swirls he looks back and says "Lets hope the Emperor doesn't find the his grit too fast." He laughs as he steps through the rip.

"He doesn't know who really is moving the field those he?" says the younger man at the sunrise.

"No and neither do I really.....and that exites me." He says rubbing the handle of his sword suggestively, "whoever is behind this really can only be after one of two things, either a sit at the table....." and he stops looking at the younger man " or they wont the throne itself"